BONUS BILL SIDE-TRACKED IN SENATE
Various Opinions As To When It Will Be Passed.

According to the latest reports, the Tariff Bill will be acted upon by the Senate before the Adjusted Compensation Bill. Many think that the latter can not fail to come up for consideration, once the Tariff Bill is out of the way.

It is said that a canvass of the Senate discloses only 24 opponents of the bill, only 18 of whom are considered as "die-hards." The opponents of the Adjusted Compensation Bill are counting as a last resort, on President Harding's vetoing the bill if it is passed. It is doubtful, however, whether Harding will consider the chances of the bill's being killed by his veto sufficient to justify him in incurring the ill-favor of the ex-service men.

General Cary F. Spence, who has recently made an investigation of the question, states, in the Knoxville "Journal and Tribune" of June 15, that he is confident the bill will be passed this session.

The time of active opposition to the bill by any large part of Congress seems to be past. When it finally comes to definite action, which will be when nothing else can be drummed up as an excuse for further delay, the Adjusted Compensation Bill will go through.

REST AND RECREATION ROOM IN CARRICK HALL

The rest and recreation room that was opened for vocational students in Carrick Hall several weeks ago is proving very attractive to the students. It is well appreciated, is shown by the way the students take advantage of it, and by the care they show in keeping it in good shape.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of McGhee Tyson Post furnished and decorated this room. The Vocational Department owes the Ladies Auxiliary a public expression of its gratitude for such a needed and useful present. It takes this opportunity of expressing its obligation, knowing that in so doing, it is voicing the individual sentiments of every vocational student.

WAR RISK AND GOVERNMENT INSURANCE

Government Extends Reinstatement Period

Two or three months ago, March 15, to be exact, the government ended its special campaign to induce all ex-service men to reinstate their War Risk Insurance. A considerable number of the local vocational students recognized their opportunity, and took advantage of it, but many through delay, or thoughtlessness, let that day go by without reinstating their policies.

It is for the benefit of these last mentioned, and also those who, although they did reinstate their policies as the time, have begun to let them lapse again, that this article is written.

If there is anything in the world easier than falling off a log, it is neglecting insurance. We are just apt to say to ourselves: "Well, here it is about three months since I was about to sign up for that insurance, and nothing has happened to me yet. I have saved a quarter of a year's premium, and can still buy the insurance anytime I want to; for the cost of the policy has not increased to amount to anything in three months." We think we have pulled a good one on old Father Time, but the first thing we know another three months will be gone, then another year, and after awhile opportunity will have passed out of our grasp forever. We will have saved a few monthly premiums, but in doing so we lose the interest on our money, protection in case of emergency, and in most cases the few dollars we may have saved themselves, through spending them for things we could have done without. And, besides, it is a mighty uncertain business, this pulling the wool over Father Time's eyes, because of his companions, Uncle Accident, and Old Man Disease, who are liable at any time to help him out. There is just one benefit to falling to buy insurance, and that is that your wife and little ones suffer after your death, when you are no longer worried by their sufferings.

AMERICAN LEGION LUNCHEON CLUB ORGANIZED

A recent event of importance to American Legion members is the organization of the American Legion Luncheon Club. All members of post No. 2 and McGhee Tyson Post are eligible for membership in this club. But the organization is just what it is called, a club and Legion Organization but requires that its members first be members of one or the other of the Legion Posts, just as the Shriners for instance, require that their members first be Masons.

This club meets every Monday from 12:15 to 1:15 in the Business Men's Club.

Every member of McGhee Tyson Post is cordially invited to be present at these meetings. It is the intention of the secretary of the club to send out individual invitations meanwhile, don't wait for them; but consider this announcement as a general invitation, and take advantage of it.

SUMMER SCHOOL IN FULL SWING

The Vocational Department stopped out of its regular session on a Saturday, observed a one-day vacation, and entered upon its Summer Session on Monday. Our Summer Session, unlike that of the regular university, is composed of practically all the students who attended during the regular year. It is true however that quite a number are taking the long vacation, receiving summer hospitalization, or have been transferred to some other school. To meet this depletion, new students are being entered continually. A notable addition to the enrollment of the vocational summer session is the group of medical students who attend the U. of T. Medical School at Memphis.

The regular Summer Session of the University began June 12. Its registration is now nearly a thousand of which the majority are women. A new and beneficial feature of the summer school is the new Jefferson Hall Auditorium, on Watauga Field. This fine auditorium will accommodate about 2500 persons. At the regular chapel hours of the summer school, and at night, some very interesting and instructive lectures are being given there, as well as some fine musical programs. Vocational students should not miss any of these numbers. They are for us as well as the other students, and are worth anybody's time to hear.

According to Dr. Thackston, director of the summer school, the number of summer school students taking courses for college credit is 50% greater than it has ever been before.

It lets you out, but what about them?

Reproof is of little value where it is not followed by instructions which show how the harm may be undone. The real object of this article, then, is not to give you a penning for your failure to reinsate and keep up your insurance, but to call your attention to the fact that it is not yet too late. War Risk Insurance may be reinstated at any time between now and March 4, 1926. The object of the campaign which ended March 15, 1928, was simply to stir the men up to act now. And the greatest danger of such an extended time wherein we can reinsate our insurance, is that we shall the habit of procrastination grow upon us. Procrastination, is not as the little boy said, one of the chief doctrines of the Presbyterian Church, but it is one of the principal practices of mankind. Avoid it and you will have avoided a big slice of the trouble that is awaiting you in life.

War Risk Insurance may be reinsated at any time by the payment of two monthly premiums on whatever amount of it you desire to reinsate, the premium for the month your policy lapses, and the first monthly premium on the reinsated policy. Any amount not less than $1000.00 may be reinsated.

The real benefit in the Government proposition is the conversion of the War Risk Insurance into the Government Insurance. This conversion may be made at any time before March 1926, but must be made at the end of that time, Government Insurance offers all the common forms of insurance policies, straight life, endowment, 20—payment or 30—payment.

Rates on Government Insurance are considerably lower than those charged by the old line companies, because the expenses of operating the insurance departments are not taken out of the receipts from premiums, but are covered by government appropriations.

Another attraction about Government Insurance is the liberal terms of payment. Premiums may be paid annually, semi-annually, quarter

It is with the hesitancy of inexperience that we make our first bow upon this journalistic stage. We feel somewhat like the bashful schoolboy, who reluctantly advances to the platform on Friday afternoon, with knocking knees, dry throat and a sinking heart, to "speak a piece."

But we are not entirely devoid of self-confidence in spite of these de eralizing symptoms and we already have an anticipatory glow of satisfaction at the thought of making good. We are a novice at the newspaper game, an infant, with all the innocence, chubbiness, and various other charms that belong to that stage of life, but this is Spring and we have some sap in our trunk, so we expect to grow. It would be just like some rival contemporary to pull a state joke to the effect that we show possibilities of growth in another way, namely: that we are green. Or, someone might hint that with the sap rising in our trunk, there may be a chance of our becoming a saphead eventually. We therefore rob him of the malicious satisfaction of directing these jokes at us in his clumsy style, by saying them ourself.

We repeat that we are hopeful of growing. Nobody was ever born full-grown but Adam and Eve, and they demonstrated, in the apple affair, that they were really children at heart. So we do not despise our youthfulness although we sincerely hope, for the sake of the race, that no mistake obars will duplicate the havoc wrought by the childish blunder of that unhappy couple.

Laying aside excessive seriousness aside, we wish to state further that our self-confidence rests upon a still firmer foundation than has yet been mentioned. Like the great of all generations, we are really living far ahead of our time—and in this respect, we are convinced that more depends upon determination and industry than upon that slippery quality called talent, or that "Will o' the Wisp," Luck. So we have ordered a large consignment of elbow grease, with full instructions as to how to apply, and we call you to witness what will be, at least, a sincere effort.

In launching our bark, to use an uncommon metaphor—we trust that you will not take it to mean literally our "Voice"—we ask only a fair start.

To vary the figure of speech, we merely ask that the knocking of our own keels shall be the only "knocking" heard.

The newcomer, whether, among dogs, boys, or newspapers, is always regarded with suspicion until he has been found out. In order to hasten the "finding out" process, "The Vocational Voice" wishes hereby to make its policies absolutely clear.

First of all, it emphatically disclaims any intention whatever of competing with any of the regular university publications. "The Vocational Voice" is strictly a departmental publication. It does not pretend to represent anything but the Vocational Department. It appreciates the high merits of the regular university publications, and will use its influence to awaken the student-body to a more active appreciation of these publications. There are no grounds for friction of any kind between it and them, since their activities lie in different directions.

"The Vocational Voice" has arisen to fill a crying need in the department which it is to represent. This department is composed of men who have many things in common with each other, but few with the majority of the students in the other departments of the University. They knew the monotony of camp life together, the loneliness and suffering of the battlefield and the hospital.

They are an homogeneous entity within the University, having special courses of study, athletic teams of their own, and their own American Legion Post, to which the great majority of them belong. A large number of the vocational students are men with families. On the whole, the vocational students are older than the other university students, and it may be said that they are more settled in their ways of living. They do not have the same outlook on life as the average college student, and therefore do not take interest in the same activities that he is interested in. Besides this, vocational students attend school the year around, whereas regular students, for the most part, go only nine months, and the regular university publications suspend publication during the summer.

Taking all these things into consideration, one can see the need for a separate paper for the vocational students, and the possibilities of such a paper rendering great service. And the establishment of this paper represents quite as strong a justification from the fact that it was the vocational students themselves who conceived the idea of such a paper, and that they are behind it in every way.

This, then, is to be truly "The Vocational Voice," the mouthpiece through which the group of men who are in training here under the Veteran's Bureau may speak to each other, to the folks back home, to the University, in short, to the American people. It shall be a record of the school life of these men, not only interesting and entertaining to them, now and in years to come, but also interesting to the American people, who are making possible these opportunities for the education of disabled veterans, because it will reflect the attitude of the veterans toward their opportunities, and show the way in which they are taking advantage of them.

"The Vocational Voice" will therefore endeavor to glean and publish news of peculiar interest to vocational students and ex-service men, to afford its subscribers clean entertainment and complete chronicles of their school days. It will strive, moreover, to stimulate school spirit in the best sense of the word, by emphasizing praiseworthy achievements, and encouraging all worthy efforts, in class-room, on athletic field, and in the various social activities connected with the life of the vocational students.

It will stand firmly, in brief, for the highest ideals of scholarship and citizenship, because it represents a body of men, the greater number of whom are endeavoring to attain these ideals. It is a well-known fact that so long as a body of men have no way of expressing themselves officially, they are judged by rumor and hearsay. And too often the only advertising such a group of men get is that caused by the deeds of its most irresponsible element. Thus it frequently happens that a bunch of men essentially decent and civilized receive a bad reputation wholly undeserved. This is a very important reason why there should be a "Vocational Voice," through which the steady and conservative majority of the vocational students may make itself known in the University, in Knoxville, and in the country at large.

Such then is a brief resume of the occasion for the establishment of "The Vocational Voice," and the aims and policies it will pursue. Feeling the worthiness of its aims, it here and now calls upon all who sympathize with them, for cooperation in successfully carrying them out.

THE "BRAWLEY" REHABILITATION SYSTEM

Veterans Learn Agriculture on Own Farms

An interesting experiment in vocational re-education is being tried out in Brawley, California. The plan is one worked out by the Brawley High School.

A large tract of ranch land was sold to 57 vocational students, most of whom were married. Each student could select his own tract, which might vary in extent from 5 to 45 acres. The students are living on their farms, and paying for them on a long-time payment plan, which involves interest on unpaid installments, at the low rate of 3%.

Expert instructors devote their time to teaching the trainees the best agriculture methods, and help them to put these methods to practical application on their own farms.

The government allows each student $100 a year, in addition to the standard monthly allotment, for farm implements. By pooling these implement allowances, several students have been able to acquire an adequate equipment for their farms, owning it and using it in common.

A recent investigation of this Brawley community by a government committee showed the scheme already to have produced flattering results. One ex-service man planted his acreage in lettuce, being advised and assisted by the experts, who are paid to instruct the students. This man’s returns from this year’s crops alone were sufficient to pay off all the indebtedness on his tract. He is now planning to build a $5000.00 home.

Begin your reviewing right now; it will repay you in easier times and higher grades when examinations come along, to say nothing of how much more you will actually know about your studies.

PERSONAL MENTION

Leroy Jones, who finished his course in Highway Surveying in February, now has a good position in his profession. He is now in the employ of a company that is paving the streets of Eufaula, Tennessee. Mr. Jones paid us a short visit on June 11. While in school he was a wireless worker, and a leader in every field of student activity. Our congratulations and best wishes go with him, as he demonstrates his ability to succeed in life despite his handicap.

Frank Stafford, who was rehabilitated at the same time as Mr. Jones, was at last report, in California.

Mr. Cazwell Johnston, vocational student at Maryville College, is with us in Summer School this year.

Mr. Charles Donaghy, vocational in the Law School of the University two years ago, and student at Maryville College during the past year, has been transferred to Ohio State University, where he will finish his course in law.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Kelley (newly-weds) have just returned from a trip through the west, where they visited friends and relatives. Their journey took in Muskogee, Okmulgee, Tulsa, and Tahlequah, Okalahoma, Memphis, Nashville, and Chattanooga, Tennessee. They are now back with us, ready for summer school.

David P. Adams, vocational student, T. O. Barnette and D. M. Brown, vocational department instructors, are taking a trip to Europe this summer, via cattleboat. They are working their way there and back.

Mr. Hugh E. Robertson left here for San Francisco June 17 to attend the convention of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, where he will represent the local chapter of that organization. Mr. Robertson will be gone about three weeks.

The Vocational Department’s new Dairy Instructor is Mr. Thos. H. Harrison, a graduate of Purdue University. Mr. Harrison has had considerable experience in dairy manufacturing.

Alex Stewart, who has been away for some time on account of ill health is back in school.

Wm. Henry Smith is being rehabilitated—completing his course—June 30.

Mr. Dan Campbell has resigned as Service Officer of McGhee Tyson Post, because of the fact that he is to be away during the summer.

VOCA TIONAL TEAM PICKED AS ONE OF THE BEST SIX IN EAST TENNESSEE

P fellows do you realize that we have one of the best, if not the very best amateur teams in the State? It’s true that the old Jimnix seems to have been partial to our team for a free ride recently, but we all know they have the material to defeat the best team in this vicinity—so let’s give them a boost while they need it and you will find our team will easily finish the season victorious, because you know a good team is like a good man—you can’t keep them down.

On Thursday, June 22, Vestal went down in defeat before the Vocationals with a score of 3 to 0, and it’s a well known fact that Vestal has one of the strongest teams in the city.

Sells, ex-Pioneer pitcher had no effect against the hard hitting Vocational, they garnering 6 hits while Edging gave up only 3.

VOCA TIONAL TRAINING IN THE UNIVERSITY OF ARKANSAS

The University of Arkansas has adopted a unique method of classifying vocational students who enter there for training. Any entrant who is at least 23 years of age, and who can satisfactorily pass a certain standard mental test is admitted to the regular freshman class, regardless of whether he has had the ordinarily required number of years of schooling or not. This procedure is based upon the theory of educational experts that ability to do college work depends almost exclusively upon native intelligence rather than upon the knowledge acquired in a certain number of years in elementary and high schools.

One of these days the Bonus Bill is going to pass, and, a reasonable time afterwards, we shall draw our money. But a year later, how many of us will still have it, or something to show for it?

Waterhouse: “That’s my car. The thief is just fixing a blowout.”

Policeman: “All right, I’ll go over and arrest him.”

Waterhouse: “Sh—h Wait till he gets the tire pumped up.”
SOME DOPE ABOUT OUR INSTRUCTORS

Quite a number of the vocational instructors were members of the Senior Class of the University this year and received their diplomas. The vocational students extend heartiest congratulations to them all, and feel a pleasure in their good fortune that is marred only by the fact that some of these graduates will leave the department, now that their school-days at the University are over. Wherever they may go the good wishes—and we hope the memory also—of the Vocational Department will follow them.

The following are Vocational Instructors who were graduated:

Brooks, D. C.
Crump, C. O.
Dossett, B. E.
Pitch, J. C.
Gilmore, T. R.
Henderson, J. M.
Jones, Miss Mable
Lawhon, Rudolph
Myrick, S. E.
Oliver, W. H.
Scott, D. P.
Smith, G. N.
Wilmot, R. J.
Wilson, C. C.

The names of those who are gone are as follows:

Brooks, D. C.
Crump, C. O.
Gilmore, T. R.
Lawhon, Rudolph
Myrick, S. E.
Wilson, C. C.

But the most interesting data has been saved for the last. The following instructors have taken unto themselves wives:

Prichett, J. A.
Cummins, C. L.
Gilmire, T. R.

Begin with the first issue and keep a file of "The Vocational Voice."

Don't miss a copy. Some day such a file will be priceless treasure to you—a record of your school days, and of the good times you and your friends will have had here at U. T.

Trade with our advertisers. If you do we can get more of them. If we get enough more, the subscription price of the paper can be lowered.

When you trade with anyone who advertises with us let him know you are a vocational student and that you know he has been advertising in The Voice.

Talk up "The Voice" until it becomes able to speak for itself—it surely will speak for you then.
